2020 Program Overview

Texas A&M University | February 26-27, 2020

Conference Overview

T1V is excited to offer a unique active learning grant for leaders in higher education. This grant will provide winners the opportunity to visit the Texas A&M University College of Engineering Zachry Complex in College Station, Texas.

The Texas A&M Zachry Complex is one of the most advanced active learning technology deployments in the country with 18, 96-person learning studios, 14, 48-person learning studios, 5, 24-person learning studios, 10 conference rooms, and 13 mobile carts. We invite you to experience the Zachry Complex and interact with the team responsible for this state-of-the art learning environment.

You'll meet with IT / Technology decision makers and Instructors, all while touring the facility and observing the classroom technology in action. You'll hear from fellow active learning professionals from around the country, and together you'll experience and reflect on Texas A&M's classroom technology.

Conference Expected Outcomes

After your two-day conference experience, you'll walk away with the following:

- Learnings from Texas A&M: how they qualified, vetted, tested, and deployed ALC technology
- Best practices in ALC technology deployments
- Do's and Don'ts of ALC technology: what to look for, what to avoid, and how to create buy-in
- Student and Instructor outcomes
- Ideas on how to support remote and guest instructors on your campus
- Lessons learned from your peer group, who have also deployed ALC technology and are still on a quest to find the right solution for their campus
